PROVIDES MORE MONEY

Use of Funds for General Operating Expenses Per mitted by Decision

Marietta county villages pressed for operating funds to the point where it was uncertain whether street lights could be kept burning. A hearing on a motion to obtain a injunction was held in a Supreme court

The court ruling gives cities and villages the right to apply funds coming to them from automobile license fees and gasoline taxes for general operating expenses. The Associated Press reported in a news dispatch from Columbus.

Marietta county officials also saw the ruling as a substantial help in financing municipal operations in future years, but said virtually all of the gasoline and automobile tag monies for 1935 has been contracted for street materials and work.

Heretofore, except where these levies were exacted for relief financing, the revenues were apportioned only for street and highway work.

Help To Villages

County Auditor Harry V. Mounts said the ruling would be a wonderful help to Marion county villages. He pointed out that in previous years some villages had been obliged to turn out their street lights because of lack of operating revenue, while there were several hundred dollars in the gasoline and automobile tax accounts of the village. Until today's ruling was given it was understood these funds could be used only for street work in the villages, although all of these funds were not actually needed for street work, he said.

E. H. Powell, clerk of the probate court, said that's fine when he learned about the decision. He said the village was having a difficult time keeping its bills paid and said part of the street lights already had been turned out as an economy measure. He was unable, however, to suggest how much money the decision would make available in prospect for operating purposes this year.

Fabian Sees Help

W. M. Fabian, chairman of the Marion city council finance committee, said Marion receives about $80,000 a year from gasoline taxes and automobile license fees. The right to use part of this for general operating purposes will be of

As a result, house Democratic leaders planned to rush to enactment of tomorrow night the senate's resolution extending NRA for nine and one-half months and directing that any voluntary codes which suspend anti-trust laws must include guarantees of collective bargaining, minimum wages, maximum hour, prohibition of child labor and unfair trade practices against existing law.

Eastern Bill To Be Called

Also Chairman O'Connor was authorized by his rules committee to call up whenever he sees fit the bill extending the position of transportation coordinator. He said he must seek house action today or tomorrow since the position expires at midnight Sunday unless the extension bill is passed.

O'Connor decided to call the committee into session tomorrow for a hearing on the Wagner labor disputes bill, which also has been passed by the senate and approved by a house committee.

It was understood that the rules committee would grant right of way to that bill in time for it to pass the house next week.

The present, likewise remained in suspense upon prompt enactment of the Gulfport coal bill and was informed that the house was to go to work on it.

Like this, it was added, the present expressed the hope that we would act promptly on a bill establishing a federal alcohol commission to replace the federal alcohol control administration which had been arranged.

One of the first bills to be introduced was the bill to establish a state house tax and meat commission, which will have to be chosen in a committee to have a place on the bill.

He added, however, that the treasurer did not administer the liquor
